Харків – 2023

Методичні вказівки розглянуто та рекомендовано до друку на засіданні кафедри іноземних мов 20 жовтня 2023 р., протокол № 4.

Методичні вказівки призначено для удосконалювання навичок орієнтованого читання, систематизації знань і розширення словникового запасу у здобувачів вищої освіти 2 курсу факультету ННЦГО, які спеціалізуються у перекладі англomовної літератури. Методичні вказівки супроводжуються інтерактивними вправами, посилання на які є у кожному розділі. Робота базується на перегляді відеофрагментів та містить вправи різних типів, що вчать використовувати нові слова у мовленні, знайомить різними стилістичними засобами з новими граматичними структурами та тренує їхнє вживання у мовленні, вдосконалює монологічне та діалогічне мовлення, сприяє підвищенню читацької грамотності. Ця система вправ забезпечує отримання міцних навичок у всіх видах мовної діяльності, формує вміння висловити власну думку та обговорити з колегами питання, які виникають. Методичні вказівки розроблено відповідно до робочої програми дисципліни і є складовою частиною УМКД.

Exercise 7: Analyze the characters

(Use the words to fill the graphic)

Joe	Pip

Exercise 8: Think and discuss

The author describes Pip's feelings towards Joe. Their meeting demonstrates the discontinuity of the working class and upper class. Joe wants to show respect for his young friend, Joe comes in a comfortless suit and addresses Pip formally "Sir." Joe obviously feels so out of place. Pip gathers that he would have realized his unfair treatment if he were perceptive. Pip understands that he should be easier with Joe. He even wants to stay at Joe's house next time when visiting Miss Havisham. Nevertheless, he doesn't even stop by. Pip feels a sense of guilt about his working-class parenthood.

Exercise 8: Think and discuss

The author analyzes in this chapter the theme of social class by revealing the indisputable power of money. Money can change and control people's lives. Odd Miss Havisham is a wealthy woman. She uses her money as a power to control other people not even leaving her house. Estella pays a high price for being rich. She almost loses her identity and accepts Miss Havisham's worldview. Miss Havisham is the puppet master. Estella is a puppet on a string. Being a puppet, Estella controls another puppet, a young man who is in love with her – Pip. Miss Havisham is full of hatred. She desperately needs revenge on men. However, it would not be possible without money. The tortured soul is trying to ruin everything around turning money into dust.

Exercise 8: Think and discuss

Almost from the beginning of the novel, Pip is trying to reject any connection to the lower classes. He wants to forget the fact of being acquainted with criminals, even his friend Joe and his work as a blacksmith. Now Pip understands with bitterness that a person from a class he was trying to escape helped him to become a gentleman.

Miss Havisham uses her money to control other people. Magwitch uses the money to make Pip's dreams come true. In both cases, the characters are ready to fulfill their masters' dreams. Pip becomes a gentleman who shows his superiority. Estella wreaks vengeance on men.

Compeyson	Magwitch

Exercise 8: Think and discuss

Herbert as a loyal friend generously puts himself in danger in order to protect Pip and his benefactor. Nevertheless, Pip's intention to waste money on luxury goods gave him a bad reputation. It is a mistake to suppose Clara will like him for such mindless behavior. The only way to save Magwitch's life is to break the law. Pip and Herbert are trying to get the convict out of the country. They can't trust anyone to actually provide justice. Just as many years ago Pip stole for Magwitch, he is now falling foul of the law in spite of being a gentleman. This time he is not a small generous boy, but an adult thankful young man.

SCRIPTS TO THE CHAPTERS

Chapters 27-28

In Chapter 27 of Great Expectations Pip gets a letter from Biddy, announcing that Joe is coming to London to visit Pip. Pip prepares for the visit worried about how Joe will fit in with Pip's gentlemanly lifestyle. Pip's apartment has changed from its original appearance, being decorated with fine things and having a servant in a uniform. Now Pip says about this servant, “I had made the monster and had clothed him with a blue coat, canary waistcoat, white cravat, creamy breeches. I had to find him a little to do and a great deal to eat. He haunted my existence.” So even though Pip can't stand the servant, he puts up with him for appearances sake. Pip spending to keep up with these appearances has already put him in debt to an upholsterer. Pip expects Joe to arrive for breakfast and nervously awaits his old friend. He hears a person climbing the stairs and realizes it's Joe by his clumsy gait. Joe and Pip greet each other as old friends, but Pip immediately senses Joe's discomfort. The blacksmith is uncomfortably dressed in a suit and talks in an awkward way, trying to respect Pip as a gentleman.

Joe tells Pip that Mr. Wopsle has left the church and become an actor. Herbert enters and greets Joe, who carefully takes off his hat and balances it on the edge of the fireplace mantle. During breakfast the hat topples, causing Joe to catch it and place it back on the mantle. This routine happens several times, until the hat ends up splashing into the slop basin. Pip feels impatient and upset. After breakfast Herbert leaves. Joe informs Pip that Miss Havisham wants the young man to visit her and Estella, who's come home. Then Joe admits he's feeling wrong out of the forge and out of his work clothes and says goodbye to Pip.

In Chapter 28 of Great Expectations Pip regrets the way he treated Joe during his visit. Because of this Pip plans to stay at Joe's home when visiting Miss Havisham. Torn between his snobbishness as a gentleman and his friendship for Joe, Pip gradually convinces himself that such an arrangement would not work well. So he decides to stay at his beloved old tavern the Blue Boar. On the day of Pip's journey to visit Miss Havisham, he notices two convicts who will be traveling with him. Pip recognizes one of the convicts as the man who gave Pip a shilling wrapped in two one-pound notes so long ago, and Pip ends up having to share a carriage with these convicts who luckily they don't recognize him.

Pip overhears one of the convicts relates a story of how a fellow convict told him to find a boy and give him two one-pound notes. When Pip arrives at the Blue Boar, he reads a newspaper article that describes Pumblechook as Pip's earliest patron and "the founder of his fortunes".

Chapters 33-34

In Chapter 33 of Great Expectations, Pip meets his beloved Estella as she gets out of her coach, and she's more beautiful than ever. Estella gives Pip her purse, filled with money provided by Miss Havisham, and tells Pip, “We have no choice, you and I, but to obey our instructions.” This suggests they have to do what Miss Havisham wants them to do based on these orders. Pip has a waiter lead him and Estella to a private sitting room and orders tea. She tells Pip that she is to live with a lady in Surrey, Richmond. Also, Estella says how the Pockets, not including Matthew and his son, have misrepresented Pip as a disreputable person to Miss Havisham. But Estella laughs this off, assuring Pip that these slanders have had no effect on Miss Havisham. Pip is entranced by Estella, who allows him to kiss her cheek.

After tea, Pip takes Estella to a post coach. As Pip and Estella ride to Richmond, they pass by Newgate Prison. Pip mentions that Mr Jaggers has many clients in the prison. Since her early childhood, Estella has often seen Jaggers at Satis House, but never really got to know him. Pip feels as if his heart is in Estella's hand and she knows it. Estella tells Pip he is to visit her in Richmond whenever he thinks proper. When they arrive at her new residence, Pip says goodbye.

In Chapter 34 of Great Expectations, Pip reflects unhappily about the way he's treated Joe and Bitty. At times, Pip thinks he would have been happier if he had just remained at the forge. Pip feels guilty about how he's influenced Herbert for the worse. Following Pip's lead, Herbert spends beyond his means and, like Pip himself, has accrued large debts. Pip and Herbert have essentially fallen into deceiving themselves about enjoying their lives, which have been committed to placing importance on having a refined appearance and doing leisure activities without accomplishing anything of any real worth.

This is especially clear through the young men's involvement with the finches of the Grove Club, a club of idle wealthy young gentlemen. Pip thinks about offering to take on Herbert's debts, but he knows Herbert is too proud to accept. Herbert constantly goes into the city to look about for a job opportunity with no success. Pip and Herbert try to solve their financial woes by spending hours on their bookkeeping. However, these attempts at solvency have no effect on their spending habits. As Pip and Herbert ponder their bills Pip receives a heartbreaking letter informing him that his sister, Mrs Joe, has died.

Chapters 39-40

In Chapter 39 of Great Expectations, two years have passed and Pip is now 23 years old. He and Herbert have moved to nicer rooms. And during a stormy night, Pip reads alone near his fireplace, as Herbert is away on a business trip. A strange man comes to visit Pip wanting to talk and extending his muscular arms to the young gentleman in a friendly greeting. Pip fears this man but out of politeness invites him into his apartment. Pip soon recognizes the man as the convict he helped on the marshes many years before. The man accepts a drink and sits by the fire, revealing that he knows how much money Pip receives each year and that his former guardian was Jaggers. Pip almost faints upon realizing that this former convict, not Miss Havisham, is his benefactor. The man explains how he became a successful sheep farmer. When he began to make good money, he decided to make Pip into a gentleman and set up the arrangements with Mr. Jaggers. The man expresses pride in Pip's fine clothes and fancy rooms but confesses that his arrival in England is dangerous. If a convict sent abroad returns to England, he will be arrested if found out. Pip feels abhorrence toward this man for loading him with his "wretched gold." On top of the shock Pip now feels he holds the fate and safety of this man in his hands.

Pip lets the man sleep in Herbert's bed. Pip now knows Miss Havisham never intended Estella for him, instead she used him for Estella to practice her skills of manipulating, demoralizing and entrapping men. Terror fills Pip as he realizes he might not be safe having this former convict under the same roof.

In Chapter 40 of Great Expectations, Pip wakes up from a restless sleep realizing he cannot keep the former convict at his residence because doing so would be too conspicuous. While it's dark, Pip leaves his rooms and stumbles over a man near the staircase, crouching in a corner. The watchman informs Pip that during the night he let in two strangers, who appeared to be together. One stranger Pip identifies as his former convict, but the other stranger remains unidentified.

Before breakfast the former convict tells Pip his name is Abel Magwitch, but he goes by Provis. Also Magwitch says he came alone last night, although he suspected someone might be walking near him. After breakfast Magwitch says he's planning to stay with Pip. Distraught, Pip decides Magwitch should dress like a prosperous farmer. Magwitch stays in Pip's room while Pip goes out to rent a room for Magwitch and buy him clothes. Pip then visits Jaggers to verify that Magwitch's story is indeed true. Without admitting any knowledge of Magwitch being in England, Jaggers verifies that the convict had been transported to Australia and had written him from New South Wales. Pip admits he always thought Miss Havisham to be his benefactress. Jaggers takes no responsibility for Pip's misunderstanding. When Herbert returns home, Magwitch makes him swear not to reveal his true identity.

Chapters 45-46

In Chapter 45 of Great Expectations, Pip goes to a hotel in Covent Garden, where he spends a restless night wondering why he shouldn't go home and if Magwitch is safe. The next day Pip goes to Wemmick's castle where he finds Wemmick preparing breakfast for the Aged P. Without naming names, Wemmick implies that a convict left Australia and theories had been raised about where he went. He also warns Pip he is being watched. Pip asks Wemmick if he ever heard of Compeyson, and if this person is alive, and if so, is he living in London. Wemmick nods his head "Yes" in response to each question.

Without referring to Magwitch by name, Wemmick says Herbert decided to hide Magwitch in the house of his fiancée, Clara, in a secluded part of London. Wemmick suggests that Pip eventually board Magwitch on a foreign packet-boat. Wemmick gives Pip the address of Herbert's fiancée and then leaves for work.

In Chapter 46 of Great Expectations, Pip arrives at Clara's house, where Herbert greets him. Herbert introduces Pip to Clara, a very pretty girl with a modest demeanor. She and Herbert seemed deeply smitten with each other. Herbert takes Pip to Magwitch's room, where the former convict is comfortably lodged. Pip tells Magwitch he is under suspicion and being watched.

Herbert then relates a plan for getting Pip and Magwitch out of the country. Pip could develop the routine of rowing a boat on the Thames. As Pip rows past Magwitch's hideaway, Magwitch could lower the shade of his window as a signal that all is well. Eventually Pip could include Magwitch in the boat. People would be used to seeing Pip rowing and would not take note of an extra passenger. Pip and Magwitch would wait in the rowboat for a foreign packet-boat to pick them up. Pip and Magwitch agree to this plan. Pip heads home and soon enough implements the routine of rowing, but he cannot shake the fear of being watched.
